Grandma Esther Smith

Roseburg OR
Before 1920

This photograph shows my great-great-grandmother, Esther Wells Smith, seated in a chair with a newspaper in hand—a quiet moment in the morning light.

On the reverse, the word Grandma appears in cursive, almost certainly in my grandmother Blanche Toner Dear's distinctive hand, recognizable by her unique "G." In my own handwriting, it reads: Esther Smith, Roseburg, Oregon, before 1920. The date is uncertain. Esther lived in Roseburg for many years and may have remained there after 1920, perhaps more so than before. I likely added this note in the late 1970s or early 1980s during one of several sessions with my grandmother, when we went through photographs together for identification.

The image is slightly double exposed. Soft light streams through lace-curtained windows at her side, and a small purse hangs within easy reach on the wall. The patterned wallpaper—intricate and richly detailed—reflects a style likely influenced by Victorian design. It would be fascinating to know its original colors.

This is a standard postcard, measuring 5 7/16 inches by 3 3/8 inches.
